The DIVAS Dish—Animal Advice from the Wise Asses

Dear Divas,

We are a large family of turkeys.

We would like to stay that way.

The dreaded November celebration approaches, and our flock fears the worst.

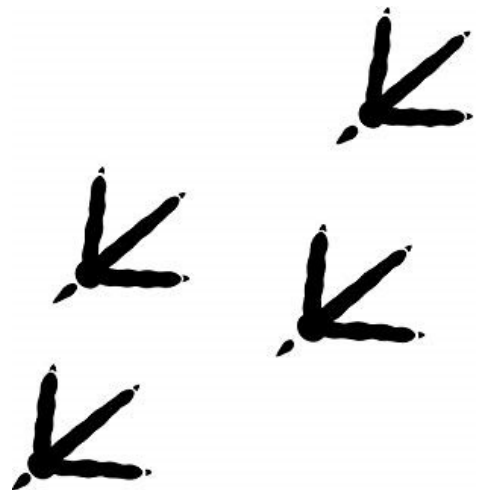

The little birds tell us you are wise and all-knowing.

You are clearly safe and well fed. That speaks highly of you.

What do we do? And how do we do it?

With a wobble in our gobble,

Terrified Turkeys

Dear Terrified Turkeys,

There is a beautiful directness to be found in the uncomplicated workings of a birdbrain. We appreciate your simple, straightforward query. Essentially, how do we live to gobble another day?

You have come to the right place, and to the right Asses.

Dunrovin Ranch is a haven for all creatures, smart and simple, and we Divas take pride in personally sponsoring and guaranteeing your safety.

We know how frightening the month of November can be for our furred and feathered friends. We've witnessed the wild look in certain humans' eyes when hunting season is upon us,. We count ourselves lucky to be modern, civilized donkeys - no longer consigned to roaming the lonely steppes of the Great Wilderness, existing in a perpetual state of fear.

No, we have evolved beyond such primitive concerns,. We now feel a sense of duty toward less fortunate creatures.

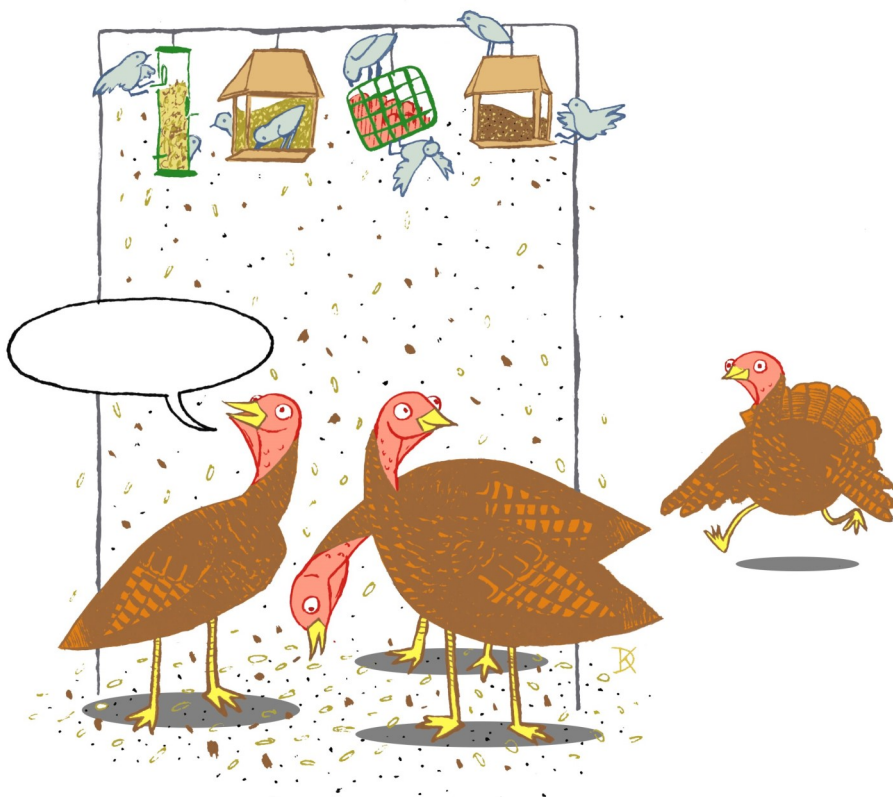

Our prescription for a long and healthy life is thus: Eat whatever you can, as often as you can, and never stray outside the ranch's property lines. 'No Hunting' signs are being erected as we write this, and we are happy to provide you with the very latest look in Hunter Orange for the whole flock.

Our devoted viewers will no doubt support our efforts to keep Dunrovin a safe space for all creatures, regardless of IQ.

Does that help ease your wobbly gobbling?
November is now a time of year we can ALL be thankful for.

Your Devoted Patrons,

Gertie and Maude Miss Gertie Miss Maude

What are the turkeys saying to the messy birds who spill sunflower seeds on the ground for them to eat?
